Allrig signs partnership agreement with Lee C. Moore, A Woolslayer Company

We are very pleased to announce that we have completed the signing of Allrig's partnership agreement with leading drilling structures company Lee C. Moore, A Woolslayer Company ("LCM-WCI").

Enhanced drilling structure support

We believe that consolidation and collaboration are crucial to creating a stronger industry in the long term. Working together in smarter ways and challenging the status quo through innovation & partnership is what it's all about. The partnership with LCM-WCI will further enhance our drilling structure service support. Allrig's CEO Mark Hannigan explains: "Allrig is delighted to enter this partnership with Lee C. Moore, A Woolslayer Company, which further enhances our drilling structures inspection and repair capability. By combining the OEM credentials, world class engineering and service experience of LCM-WCI with the responsiveness and competence of Allrig's in-region service capability, we can now offer our clients the level of drilling structure support they need. As always, Allrig is focused on Keeping You On Day Rate and this agreement improves our ability to do just that."

Total service solution

To get more insight in what the added value of this partnership is to the industry, Allrig's Operations Director, Steve Johnson, explains that this partnership enables us to offer even more efficient complete service solutions.

"As part of our growth strategy, it is a major achievement to be in partnership with LCM-WCI, one of the world's longest established drilling structure designers and manufacturers.

This agreement will enable us to serve our Middle East and India clients, as the OEM agent, and augmenting LCM-WCI sales and service including drilling structure API inspections, repairs, upgrades and supply of OEM LCM parts.”

Great opportunities

The oil & gas industry is dynamic and constantly in search of robust partnerships with key industry players. This new partnership offers great possibilities for both Lee C. Moore, A Woolslayer Company and Allrig. Tom Wingerter, CEO of LCM-WCI, explains: “We have been looking at various avenues for a more robust presence in certain Middle East markets and India for a very long time. After a few meetings with Allrig we knew this partnership offered tremendous potential. Allrig’s capabilities as an in-region field services provider coupled with our 110-year rig structure and component engineering legacy, mesh extremely well. We are very excited to formally shake hands with Allrig on this opportunity.”
